

Government & Politics

EDEXCEL Specification

General information:

What an exciting time to study Politics. In 2016 we saw the transformative Brexit Referendum in the UK and the USA elected its first non-politician as president. That same anti-establishmentarianism continues to challenge existing political systems across Europe. In the UK the selection of Boris Johnson as Prime Minister may reflect that same desire to challenge the status quo. A level Government and Politics will help you understand the context and consequences of these momentous changes.

Course content:

Component 1: The Politics of the UK: students will study democracy and political participation including political parties, pressure groups, electoral systems, voting behavior and the media. We also study political ideas of liberalism, conservatism socialism and feminism.

Component 2: The Government of the UK: students will study the Constitution, Parliament, Prime Minister and Executive.

Component 3: The Government and Politics of the USA including a comparison of the UK and US systems.

How is the course taught and assessed?

Politics is taught by two teachers using a variety of methods ranging from teacher led discussion to student led debate and research. Students are expected to keep abreast of developments in the news to enhance their understanding of the topics covered in class. At the end of each topic students are expected to submit an essay which is completed at home. Students are also expected to complete routine homework and independent study work outside of the classroom. Assessment is by three papers each contributing to a third of the final mark. The format of these papers is largely essay based.

Beyond the curriculum:

All Politics students are expected to join the schools thriving Politics Society. This is a student run society which attracts a variety of speakers from the world of politics and has included MPs, peers, journalists and academics. In 2016 the society hosted the largest Brexit debate in the South West and in May 2017 was set to host a massive General Election hustings. Unfortunately the tragic events at Manchester Arena intervened. In 2019 we held hustings for the unanticipated EU Parliament elections which attracted considerable interest from the public, protesters and press. We routinely make a visit to the Houses of Parliament during the course and last year we made a visit to the EU Parliament in Brussels.
